

Late afternoon: cool down room and draw butterflies toward front of cage near sleeve opening with a bright light or window.

At night, reverse light so that the back is lit. As long as the temperature is below 68 deg F, the butterflies will remain calm and at the front of the cage for easy gathering. Reach in and grab a handful by the wings. I normally collect about 10-12 per handful.

