

When cage is filled, place in front of bright light with the sleeve face on the opposite side in order to draw the butterflies to the 'non-sleeved' front side of the cage. Once the butterflies have clustered, place into fridge.

(Hint – I normally take the butterflies that are going to be shipped the next day and place into a separate cage for immediate shipping. This allows me to always ship freshly emerged butterflies except for Thursdays, due to the high volume going out that day.)

Then, on Wednesday night, I prepare my Thursday butterflies with a good feeding.

Then, back in the fridge for Thursday shipping.

